Practical Tools and Strategies for Addressing Students' Needs

Thursday, September 29, 2016

GRREC Office & Training Facility • 230 Technology Way • Bowling Green, KY

For the majority of our students, school is the defacto service provider of mental health services. The emotional and mental health issues our students face can be overwhelming! Having the skills and knowledge to address student mental health issues can be challenging for school counselors. In order to provide effective services, precision of assessment and intervention planning is crucial. A multi-tiered system approach to address mental health issues is key to successful intervention. Join Dr. Nancy Bertuleit and Kathy Maciel as they provide guidance and practical tools for assessing and coordinating the care of students with emotional and behavioral needs.

During this session, participants will:

- Learn how to utilize a problem-solving approach for student intervention
- Determine how to devise a quality intervention team with key stakeholders
- Gain confidence in addressing the needs of students exhibiting mental health issues
- Identify evidence-based practices that meet the specific emotional/behavioral needs of students
- Discover how to integrate mental health strategies within a multi-tiered systems of support framework
